Monday 18th

1:30

Condo Chejwaya Water project

QBL are helping the poorest communities in Bolivia, the poorest country in South America will discuss this project that Cherry Tree newly supports.

With first hand accounts and pictures, the discussion looks at projects for getting fresh water to communities in the Andes and on the Altiplano, especially those that Cherry Trees has supported. Condo Chejwaya is a very remote highland community of Aymara people. The water has to be piped a considerable distance crossing ravines and valleys (8 km?). Cherry Tree have already raised more than half of the very substantial costs involved. Time permitting some of the agricultural projects that QBL support, including llamas, trout farming and greenhouses will be covered.

Tuesday 19th

11:00

Green Gardening

Discussion will include value of compost making and recycling including use scrap items in the garden, i.e. old tyres, carpets, and metal grids

Using coppiced wood as supports i.e. hazel

Creating habitats for wildlife working with nature - chemical free

Propagating your own plants, swapping plants seeds and cuttings, right place right plant therefore reducing watering, use of succulents in containers, collecting water, grey water

Not cutting the lawn too much, being efficient thus not wasting energy (linking to permaculture principles of design)

'Dirty Oil'

A behind-the-scenes documentary that takes a look into the strip-mined world of Alberta, Canada where the vast and toxic Tar Sands deposit supplies the U.S. with the majority of its oil.

(US gas consumption currently uses the same amount as the next 20 top countries combined)

We are introduced to an Aboriginal community in Alberta who are being affected by the strip mining happening up the river from where they live. The government are denying they are affected in any way but research from independent bodies is proving otherwise as can be seen in the documentary. It's interesting that words like 'asthma' or 'cancer' didn't exist in their language until the huge oil refineries moved in

Alaska Wind Farm

Is a wind farm project, planned for a quarry nr Wareham in Purbeck, Dorset, consisting of 4 large wind turbines having the capacity to power just over 5,000 homes every year, if constructed. It's called Alaska, after Alaska Environmental Contracting, which is the landowner's business. This November, Purbeck District Council will make a decision on the future of this project.

It would be Dorset's first wind farm and an important contribution to renewable energy in the UK.

'Under Rich Earth'

Is a story about ordinary people with extraordinary courage. In a remote mountain valley in Ecuador, coffee and sugarcane farmers face the dismal prospect of being forced off their land to make way for a mining project. Unprotected by the police and ignored by their government, they prepare to face down the invaders alone. Their resistance ultimately leads to a remarkable and dangerous stand off between farmers and a band of armed paramilitaries deep in the Cloud forest. In a world dominated by news of massacres and terrorism, this is a surprising and poignant tale of hope and determination

Friday 22nd

11:00

Permaculture

Discussion explains how three key aspects:

1. an ethical framework
2. understandings of how nature works, and
3. a design approach

are combined to support the creation of sustainable agriculturally productive, non-polluting and healthy settlements. This means in some cases adapting our existing settlements. In other it can mean starting from scratch. Both offer interesting challenges and opportunities.

With the aim of sustaining human activities for many generations to come, in harmony with nature with thriving communities in self-reliant regions, biodiverse agriculture and social justice, peace and abundance.
