

WHY US?

Apartheid didn't collapse, people got together and struggled, and sang, and persisted. Women weren't given the vote, they joined with each other and made universal suffrage essential. And so it goes. It's a well-worn argument, but that doesn't make it less right. Most of the freedoms we enjoy today have been won by people stepping out of line to make the world a better place by taking back power. And this means confronting the powerful who wish to preserve the status quo.

Climate change won't just go away until we, that's you and me, get together and create moments of resistance and celebration that break through this grey, complacent slide towards catastrophe.
